As the end of the school year draws to a close, we have been trying to sum up the past 12 months here at Cheadle Hulme Primary School. Words such as extraordinary, unique and unpredictable first came to mind but as we began to reflect on both the challenges and the highlights we have shared together as a community, it is clear that everything we do remains rooted in our four curriculum drivers.

Respect: never have we felt more proud of our children, their parents and carers and the whole team here at school. The past twelve months has taught each and every one of us more about ourselves, to appreciate others and to value the small things in life that we may have once taken for granted. Being able to attend school (in person!) and be surrounded by happy children and adults has reminded everybody what special places schools really are. Our collective efforts to respect government guidance, respect individual needs and to respect the safety of others has been of paramount importance to minimise any further disruption to education. Once again, we want to thank you for the part you have played in this throughout the year.

Technology: who would have thought we would be logging back on to Microsoft Teams as many times as we have done so during the 20-21 year! Despite the challenges posed by this, it has enabled all children to learn, to communicate and to hold on to a sense of belonging and connection with their peers as times when they have not been able to be together in person. We know the strain that remote education has put on each family and those of our team, but it has also meant that our pupils have had the best possible education during this time and for this alone it has to have been worth it.

Collaboration: whether in school, or at home, it has been a joy to see how our pupils have collaborated with each other to overcome challenges in their learning this year. They have learned from each other, supported each other and been successful together. Hearing our school being filled with the sound of children laughing, singing and cheering each other on for their achievements and efforts has been a joy. Long may it continue and become louder each day.

Possibilities: the past twelve months has highlighted the many ways that we have had to challenge ourselves, as well as each other, and to push boundaries. Our children have definitely led by example here. Despite being the youngest, they have taught us all so much: what resilience looks like, what is important and that we should remember to smile...lots! We are optimistic that the year ahead holds many exciting possibilities and cannot wait to experience these with the children, yourselves and the brilliant team here at Cheadle Hulme Primary School.

Thank you again for the incredible support you have given this year and we wish you a fantastic summer.

September 2021

We are hopeful that September will bring a slight return back to normality at school, though this does of course depend on what the next few weeks bring. We will write to you again prior to the start of the next year regarding the measures that we will have in place so please check your email from 3pm on 1st September.

One thing we do expect to be able to do is remove the staggered timings of our school day and return to a 8:50-9:00am drop off for all pupils and a 3:15pm pick up for Rec-Y2 pupils or 3:20pm for Y3 pupils.

Important Dates

1st Sept INSET Day
2nd Sept School Re-opens for Pupils

Article 31:

All adults should make decisions in the best interests of the child.
