This week we celebrated National Poetry Day in school and all of our children have worked incredibly hard to read, write and perform poems in their classes around this year's theme of 'Vision - See it like a Poet'. It is always a privilege to read our pupils' writing, to hear their ideas and share their enthusiasm as part of the writing process and in fostering a love for language. As a Rights Respecting School, we agree with one of the Ambassadors for National Poetry Day, Michael Rosen, in recognising the importance of poetry and how it can enable children to share what matters to them and how they feel:

"Poetry is a way of looking at the world and yourself where the truth is to do with how a person feels rather than something that has to be proved. The truth in most poetry lies in the language of trying to say something that matters in a way that feels true to you."
