

A very warm welcome back to you all, we hope you had a relaxing (if not particularly eventful!) half term break.

This week, we joined schools across the country in celebrating UK Parliament Week which provided a great opportunity for all children to discuss what democracy is, how it relates to them and the issues that may surround it. Pupils were encouraged to talk and write about issues that matter most to them, with letters being sent to our local MP that express their opinions on anything from environmental issues to school meals. Our Y1 pupils even received a Tweet from Marcus Rashford acknowledging their efforts!

Another highlight of the week has been the launch of our brand new Pupil Parliament. This will create a network of pupil groups, named after real government departments, that will work on specific projects in school (and eventually in our wider community) to bring about positive change on the issues and ideas that matter most to them. We look forward to sharing how our Pupil Parliament develops and the exciting opportunities this will provide to our pupils over the course of the year.
